

WRITING A CONCLUSION

Essay title: Contrast the use of social media versus newspaper reporting in at least two recent outbreaks of civil unrest.

EXAMPLE

Social media has changed the impact of civil unrest by allowing participants to shape their own stories, without needing to go through official channels or depend on friendly contacts in major media. In contrast, newspapers are able to spend more time on the official and long-term story of the events. However, often these reports now include the moment-by-moment stories as told via social media, greatly increasing the impact of that medium. In the future, our ability to understand events in greater depth may depend on the opportunity to preserve these fleeting tweets, updates and stories told on platforms designed to be transient, rather than leaving such depth of analysis exclusively in the realm of the more standard media outlets.

EXAMPLE BROKEN DOWN WITH COMMENTS ON PAGE 2

1

Adapted from The University of Manchester Library, My Learning Essentials, Never a wasted word: Writing your essay (Creative Commons CC BY-NC 4.0)

BROKEN DOWN EXAMPLE

COMMENTS

Social media has changed the impact of civil unrest by allowing participants to shape their own stories, without needing to go through official channels or depend on friendly contacts in major media. In contrast, newspapers are able to spend more time on the official and long-term story of the events.

Here the student has synthesised their main points to present their overall argument.

However, often these reports now include the moment-by-moment stories as told via social media, greatly increasing the impact of that medium.

Student clearly shows what their overall conclusion is.

In the future, our ability to understand events in greater depth may depend on the opportunity to preserve these fleeting tweets, updates and stories told on platforms designed to be transient, rather than leaving such depth of analysis exclusively in the realm of the more standard media outlets.

Here the student looks to the future. Whilst they have concluded their own essay they have also suggested where further discussion could be focussed.